CAN CALVINISTIC CHURCHES BE UNITED

THREE DIFFERENT BRANCHES OF PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The Old Question of the Possibility of Merging the Three Separate Branches Into One United Church—Interests the Commissioners at Each Assembly.

At this time every year when the several general assemblies of the different branches of the Presbyterian faith are meeting in their respective sections of the country, the old question of the possibility of uniting the separate branches into one great united church, occupies much of the interest of commissioners at each assembly. The three general assemblies which are meeting in the U. S. A., in Columbus, the Presbyterian church in the U. S., in Lexington, Kentucky, and the Cumberland Presbyterian church in Nashville, Tennessee.

The latest consolidation idea among the leader in the northern Presbyterian church, officially known as the Presbyterian church in the U. S. A., is a union with the United Presbyterian church and the Congregational churches. Of course, a strong effort has been made for some time to unite the northern and southern (U. S.) churches, which were separated at the time of the Civil war and which have to difference in form of government or creed except that the southern branch is considered to be more conservative.

If there is to be any consolidation at all, the proposed union with the Congregational churches seems most probable. The Congregational and Presbyterian churches always have been very similar in doctrine, their chief difference being one of government. The Presbyterian churches are governed by official bodies composed of pastors and ruling elders, elected by the people. The ruling elders are chosen from among the male members of the congregations and the pastors are ordained to the ministry after having completed satisfactory courses in college and theological seminary. It is believed by church leaders that a union of the Presbyterian and Congregational bodies would be a benefit by enlarged numbers and more power in the New England states, where it has very few churches now, and the Congregational churches would be benefited by more permanent organization. The Congregational denomination has grown so rapidly since its beginning in pre-Revolutionary days, that there is a desire on the part of some of its members for the establishment of a permanent national organization. However, since both Congregationalists and Presbyterians are of the same Calvinistic faith many are in favor of drawing the two into organic union.

It is of interest to note that John Robinson, the pastor, who accompanied the Pilgrim fathers to Holland, had been a Presbyterian in England, after he left the Established Church of England. When the Pilgrims came to the North American continent, they established their own church, which was the foundation of the present Congregational denomination, the followers of which are to be found in many countries of the world.

On the surface, the matter of consolidation between the northern and southern branches of the Presbyterian church would seem to be very simple. However, since the breach caused by the slavery question back in the "sixties," the two new denominations have grown apart and each has adopted certain standards not accepted by the other. Fundamental doctrines are much stronger among the clergy of the southern church than in the north. At so St. Paul's advice to "Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection," is more strictly observed in the southern houses of worship and women in the northern branch are not willing to be prohibited from speaking in church. Extreme doctrinal conservatism might also hinder organic union with the United Presbyterian church which is strongest in Pennsylvania and is known as the "Psalm-singing" church because old psalms are used in place of the more modern hymns sung in other churches.

In spite of earnest and prayerful effort put forth by those churchmen who are seeking a great united church, it is not likely that anything definite will be accomplished along this line at the present general assembly. Even the two or more of the denominations might be willing to unite, there would be much to be done in the way of working out details of creeds, doctrines and forms of government.

At present the only two denominations which exchange fraternal delegates between general assemblies are the Presbyterian church in the U. S. A. and the Presbyterian church in the U. S. The Rev. Dr. W. Tallaferro Thompson was one of the speakers education at Union Theological seminary, Richmond, Virginia, is the fraternal delegate from the southern at the present assembly in Columbus. Dr. Thompson was one of the speakers at the young people's mass meeting at Memorial hall Thursday night.

Altho there probably will be no definite action this year, the "fathers" of the church are encouraged over the fact that the Christian bond of union grows stronger each year. A custom for several years, following the address of the fraternal delegate, has been for the commissioners to rise and sing:

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

Army Improves Carriage of Wounded by Plane

Washington.—Four new specially designed army ambulance airplanes soon will be placed in commission, if tests now in progress prove satisfactory.

One of the selected models has been received at McCook field, Dayton, Ohio, and is being put through its paces.

The new plane is capable of flying 100 miles an hour and has accommodations for two patients, the pilot and a flight surgeon. While the army jealously guards structural secrets of its other aircraft, it makes available to other nations information regarding ambulance airplanes. England, France, Czechoslovakia and Sweden have in turn supplied the American government with information regarding medical aerobatics.

Gas for Mosquitoes

Washington.—Gen. Amos A. Fries, head of the chemical warfare service, is trying to develop a poison gas that will exterminate mosquitoes. Officials believe such a gas can be dropped from airplanes over swamp lands.

MAN ON THE BOX SENIOR CLASS PRODUCTION

On Wednesday and Thursday of this week the seniors of Circleville high school will present their annual class play, "The Man on the Box." This modern play on which there is a very high royalty was secured thru Samuel French of New York City.

The production has been coached by Miss Lucile De Reynolds, who has made herself very well known by her ability for directing plays.

The leading characters are carried by Kathryn Sanders, Ernest Weiler, David May, George Hitler, Hester Bentley and Edwin Ziska. All of these young people have made themselves known by appearing in former plays. This comedy which has a very wonderful plot is filled with side splitting comedy.

The musical arrangement for the show is by Professor C. F. Zaenglein's orchestra. Many good seats for both nights may be secured at Wilder's drug store.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From the Wires by Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

(United Press)

Niles, O., May 26—Enraged over a family quarrel, Frank Nigra, 58, last night shot and wounded his son, Tony and Tony's bride of six months.

Cincinnati, May 25—Daily air line service between Cincinnati and Dayton is to be established June 1 by the Johnson Airplane Co., of Dayton.

Ships carrying four passengers and their hand bags will make five trips daily.

Round trip fare will be $25. Time one way will be 40 minutes. The distance is 100 miles and the service will test the demand for cross country air service in this section.

Columbus, O., May 25—Rev. Hugh W. Rankin, 75, Indianapolis, died suddenly here today at the home of his son, Winfield Rankin.

The pastor was in Columbus as a synodical missionary for four states attending the Presbyterian general assembly. Physicians said death was due to apoplexy.

CIRCLEVILLE THE COLDEST IN COUNTRY

The thermometer came up eight degrees Monday night above that of Sunday when it registered 28, the coldest for this time in May since 1896. This city, along with Wilmington in Clinton county and Richwood, Union county, have the distinction of being the three coldest places in the state on the night of May 24.

This county has had later frosts. In June, 1859, corn was frozen badly and farmers went out in the fields and sheared off the frozen tops and the corn sprouted again and made a fairly good crop.

The damage to growing vegetation is not as bad as at first reported, but tender vegetation such as beans, sweet potatoes and melon vines were killed. Beans and tomatoes in sheltered places were not injured.

THE RIGHT WAY TO KEEP ROOFERS BUSY

Someone with an acquisitive turn of mind has said that while he did not care for wealth he would like to have the re-roofing business of America. He would then be one of the country's wealthiest men.

Roughly speaking, there are some twenty-four billion square feet of roof area on small dwellings in this country. Such an amount of roofing represents an investment of more than two billion dollars. This for roofing materials of all types. Most of these roofs are not permanent; their average span of life is fifteen years or less. In other words, twenty million squares of roofing are replaced each year. It is safe to say that this replacement costs American home owners more than $160,000,000 annually.

Huge losses are suffered every year by owners who build combustible roofs. As spreaders of fire, such roofs are without a rival.

Of so-called permanent roofs the most common are the composition, the claytile, the slate and the concrete tile.

Among the three last mentioned lies the real solution of roofing. First is that of cost. The concrete tiles comes first, it is the lowest in cost of the three. Next is the cost of laying. Here again concrete ranks first, for its edges, molded in steel forms are true and even. Concrete tile are large in size and each tile is exactly like its fellow so that the workmen can proceed swiftly to cover the roof. This reduces the cost of laying. Last is the beauty and appearance of the finished roof. Here concrete tile are without peer. It is possible to get tile of any color, shade or variegated tint. The tile can be made to harmonize with the rest of the house, to carry out the architectural motif and style and the colors of concrete tile never fade.

American home owners must learn the lesson of permanent roofs. So far they have neglected this phase of home building; they attempt to cover indulgences in other parts of the structure by skimping the roof. Such procedure is folly because no other part of the house is so important as the roof.

Proof of Glacial Period

Geologists base their statements concerning the existence of the glacial period mainly upon evidence in the form of erosion of rocks, the existence of boulder clay and various other forms of deposits. The first scientific references to glacial action were suggested by the Alpine regions, as man did not exist prior to and during the early part of the glacial period. The first evidence of his existence is to be found in the later glacial period.

What King of Sheba Said

The queen of Sheba thought she knew how to live; but when she saw Solomon's idea of comfort, what really broke her heart was the poisonous reflection that for the rest of her life the king of Sheba would be saying: "My dear, why can't we have so-and-so?" Solomon has—"From 'And Five Were Foolish,' by Dornford.

NEVER HEARD OF HER

The movies look to all sorts of sources for their material and there have been diggings in many strange fields. One talented young writer thought of trying out mythology. So he went to his general manager with the story of Diana.

The general manager viewed with some interest the illustration presented.

"Who is she?"

"Diana, goddess of the chase."

"Well, she's a pretty fair looker, but we ain't making any more chase pictures."

Business Men Urged to Safeguard Checks

"Safeguard your checks as you would your money," is the admonition recently issued by the American Bankers' association in connection with their campaign to induce greater care on the part of writers of checks to frustrate forgery. And their warning is well advised, for about 95 per cent of the business of the United States is now transacted by the use of checks and other credit instruments. Here are a few of the don'ts to which the association is urging public attention: "Don't" write in pencil, erase or correct, leave spaces, sign blank checks, cash checks without verifying the indorsements. And after all they really amount to just one rule: Exercise good common sense. But so many times, unfortunately, this quality is lacking in the very quarters where one would expect to find the most of it.

Ensemble Has Invaded
Filmy Summer Fashions

The popular ensemble costume has reached into the stronghold of filmy summer fashions with such charming costumes as this one of printed silk and crepe chenette.

Paris Favors Mannish Coat of London Style

The ranee of Pudukottal is the arbiter of the craze for mannish coats now sweeping the Riviera and Paris. A coat worn by the Ranee of Pudukottal recently at Cannes was designed by one of the most famous men's tailors in London.

A great many smart American and French women who set the styles in French capitals are sending to London to have the new mannish coat made according to men's fashion.

The colors most in favor appear to be the natural beige, the tans and the silvers, and the materials are Scotch overcoatings in homespuns and check-backs, and coverts and gabardines.

The coat worn by the ranee and which created something of a furor on the Riviera was a double-breasted three-button (two to button) coat with mannish lapels and pockets. The tube effect of the coat was maintained by omitting the vent in the back.

Another similar model has two buttons and is ventless, but has well pockets instead of flaps.

A third very popular type of the two-button double-breasted strictly tailored coat has the fan vent, which lends a little dressy touch, but doesn't flare open as the wearer walks.

Ornamental Spots of Color on New Frocks

Enchanting things are shown in delicately tinted or white chiffon georgette and satin crepe, on which are applied ornamental spots of color. A dance frock of white crepe falls is simply a background for a shower of velvet rose petals with crystal drops sprinkled about.

Another of these is worked out in yellow from pale gold to deep orange. Much gold and silver are used with the crystal, pearl and colored beads. As one shops, one sees large areas in the display of new materials, all shimmering and blazing, the massive brocades and metal fabrics of the winter being translated in lighter terms. There seem to be miles of gold lace, gold nets and flouncing, showy plaques and wonderfully fashioned, fringed and tasseled ornaments. The novelty metal laces are seen on some of the latest evening gowns, wraps and negligees.

Drecol establishes a mode in evening wraps with a model of rare beauty made of fuchsia chiffon and gold lace. In one of Paton's most engaging creations silver embroidery is added to lettuce-green crepe bordered with ermine.

An Ensemble of Printed
Georgette More Unusual

The general character of the ensemble remains the same in its spring version, but it takes on a distinctly new aspect by reason of the difference in the materials used. Not only are there the most effective combinations of silk with wool and silk with velvet, but wool with linen, chiffon and crepe in plain colors and in prints are successfully put together.

Prints will be in high favor during the spring and summer and are used in most delightful ways. A clever ensemble has a long slim coat that flares a bit at the hem and is banded with white fox and lined with printed chiffon having a background of citron yellow and huge motifs in tangerine and vermilion. The dress is also of printed chiffon.

Coats of chiffon are exactly like the dress and made on the same tailored lines that distinguish coats of wool or silk. For those who are somewhat conservative, in their tastes the costumes may be developed in chiffon of a single tone or in two-toned effects, but the ensemble of printed georgette is a bit more unusual and individual.

Writes With Pessimism
About Men and Women

The young are nearly always somewhat bolshevistic because they have not yet had their chance; the old nearly always are bolshevistic because they have had their chance and not taken full advantage of it.

The most sensible people are those between the ages of thirty and forty-five.

I speak of men only; women rarely have any real sense. From the cradle to the grave they are fed on nonsense, and few entirely get rid of it. Men campaigning among women are much like candidates campaigning among voters with their hand-shaking, smiles, bows and compliments. Women should never believe a man unless they have other evidence than his gallantry, his compliments or his word of honor.

In his intercourse with other men, a man's word is frequently as good as his bond; it never is with women. Here, from youth up, he is taught to hide his wolf fangs with sheep teeth.—Designer Magazine.

Family Jointly Owned by Fred Cook and H. D. Tanton Is Gradually Increasing — Year Old Fox Gave Birth To Litter of Five Puppies.

An unusual thing happened last week at The Central Ohio Silver Fox Ranch, jointly owned by Fred Cook and H. D. Tanton, at Hagerty, a year old fox gave birth to a litter of five puppies. The size of these litters range from two to four. All the puppies so far are bred true to form, with a white tip on the ends of their tails.

This gives The Central Ohio twelve puppies the first year of its existence.

The owners of the ranch will double the size of their pens within a very short time to get ready for the increase.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. RUINED CITY OF
GIANTS IS BAREDPrehistoric Indian Town
2,500 Years Old Found in Nevada.

St. Thomas, Nev.—Cleopatra and Mark Antony were carrying on the most notorious love affair of the ages, beneath the Egyptian moon, while thousands of miles away in what is now Nevada, a feather-bedecked Pueblo chieftain, seven feet tall, was wooing a bronze-skinned maiden in the lost city of Pueblo Grande.

This is evidenced by excavations being carried on in the muddy and virgin river valleys near here, which show that Pueblo Grande was the largest single prehistoric settlement ever found on the western hemisphere.

Culture had not found its way into the barbaric cityless countries to the north of the Italian peninsula, and Christianity was unheard of at the time the ancient Phutes of Nevada were worshipping the sun.

They shaped graceful urns embellished with colored geometric designs, weaved rugs of feathers, wool and fur, cultivated corn and squash, spun threads of silk made from a then common desert shrub.

They were wearing tunics after the fashion of early Greece, living in orderly, well-planned cities and writing history.

Unearth Layers of City.

Indications are that human beings had been living in Pueblo Grande for centuries, for the expedition from the Museum of the American Indian, headed by M. R. Harrington, widely known anthropologist and archeologist, is finding strata upon strata, each layer denoting a certain well-defined period in the ancient civilization of America.

Exploration has been going on for months, but only recently, according to Mr. Harrington, has excavation uncovered almost incontrovertible evidence that the once lost city will prove to be the largest prehistoric ruin of the western hemisphere.

Big, sturdy round adobe buildings, some containing as many as twenty rooms, with hard-glazed floors, have been excavated, revealing under their circular courtyards the graves of a vanished race, with the average height skeletons found to measure over seven feet.

A woman wrapped in a feathered blanket was found in one circular burial place, with a set of new-born twins buried with her.

In many mounds already unearthed Mr. Harrington has found beautiful shell jewelry, artistically cut beads and decorated pottery of fanciful design, in addition to quantities of crude hunting implements and other primitive tools.

Several sets of perfectly formed dice, some with the corners rounded, were discovered in clay urns, indicating a fondness of this race for the thrills of gambling.

Evidence that class distinction prevailed among the vanished Nevada race was furnished when it was observed that some of the giant skeletons were found to have far more objects of art surrounding them than the average burial mound contained.

In the unearthing of this lost city, which was eight miles wide and which extended thirty-five miles to the south, has been found proof that the once thriving metropolis was from 2,000 to 2,500 years old. Harrington said:

City 2,500 Years Old.

"The corrugated and painted pottery alone would be enough to identify the vanished race as Pueblo Indians, and then when to that is added their home building, agriculture and use of turquoise and stone griddles such as the modern Pueblos use to cook their famous water bread, there can be no doubt that prehistoric Pueblo Indians dwelt in Pueblo Grande.

"The bottom has not been reached yet. Heavy erosion in the ruins indicate that Pueblo Grande was prehistoric. That houses here were occupied for perhaps centuries is shown by deep beds of ashes in numerous fireplaces.

"We have found countless fragments of flint and pottery and evidences that the houses of Pueblo Grande had been remodeled again and again. The scarcest article is a coiled basket and some sandal reed work which has to be immersed in melted wax to prevent disintegration.

Race of Giants.

"This vanished race were giants, as skeletons measure over seven feet in height. What became of them is a mystery. Like the pigmy cliff-dwellers of the South, they have vanished."

One theory explaining the extinction of the giant Pueblos, according to Harrington, is the progressive drying up of the country.

The Indians could no longer get sufficient water for their crops and they perished. The wind of the desert eroded their dwellings.

Weeds grew in their gardens, temples caved in, and the relentless desert sand drifted in and covered the whole city, burying all evidence of a once great race and keeping the secret locked in the depths for centuries.

Equal to Tut's Tomb.

Officials of the Museum of the American Indian in New York declared that the finding of the lost city in Nevada is as important to America as the excavations of Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb are to Europe.

George G. Heye, founder of the museum and its director, said the discovery was of unusual interest to scientists because no ruins of this sort have ever before been reported so far west.

He said the city apparently was older than pueblos discovered in Arizona and New Mexico by the Spaniards.

The pottery unearthed was found to be of very archaic type, made by men who did not use the potter's wheel or know the process for glazing, Heye said.

One of the most important discoveries Harrington made, said Heye, was that the giants buried their dead under the floors of houses, which apparently were abandoned after the interment.

Another thing provoking the belief that the tribe was very ancient was the fact that most of the houses were small.

Not once did the excavators come across glass beads, metal or types of crockery that would indicate the white man had known these giants.

Jails Mother for Keeping
Son, 13, Out of School

Minneapolis.—Mrs. Inez Wooley is serving a ten-day jail term because she refused to send her son Howard, thirteen years old, to school. It was the first time in this city a parent had been sentenced to imprisonment for that offense.

Howard Wooley was a pupil at the Jackson school. His mother was arrested December 12, 1924, on complaint of Miss Julia Drew, school attendance officer, who charged Mrs. Wooley with persistently evading the law. Mrs. Wooley in court pleaded guilty to failing to send her child and was sentenced by Municipal Judge Reed. He ordered execution of sentence stayed until June 19, 1925. January 8, 1925, the stay was vacated, and Mrs. Wooley was ordered committed to jail.

Mrs. Wooley said Howard was not in Minneapolis, and refused to tell where he was until she was ordered to jail. Then she said he was at Fairfax, Minn. Telegrams were sent Fairfax authorities asking the boy be returned to Minneapolis at once.

Survives 72 Helpings of English Meat Pudding

London.—Francis Bourn has just completed a run of 72 annual helpings of the famous but heavy meat puddings, the product of the "Olde Cheshire Cheese" of Fleet street.

The pudding is served free at the hostelry to all customers at the opening of the season each year. Mr. Bourn is ninety-two years old and still healthy. He has been a constant customer at the Cheshire Cheese, he says, since 1851.

The inaugural ceremony is usually presided over by some noted figure, such as the premier, a cabinet minister or an ambassador, and a place of honor is always reserved for the person who can claim to be oldest customer of the inn. Mr. Bourn has received the first helping in this seat of honor for the last nineteen years and has had his pudding served by the late American ambassador, Walter Hines Page, and Ambassadors Davis and George Harvey.

The famous pudding is known to contain rump steak, kidney, lark and oysters.

Who Neglected Traveler

Windermere, England.—The proprietor of a leading hotel in this district will sleep with one eye open for the future, since he was fined $250 and costs by the county court judge for failing to let a traveler into the hotel for several hours one morning.

The traveler told the court he was stranded through his baggage being lost and tried to obtain admission to the hotel at five o'clock in the morning. It was after seven when he got in, and during the wait was exposed to rain and cold.

The traveler said that he did not bring the action in a vindictive spirit, but wished to register his protest against the proprietor's refusal to entertain travelers and to show them that innkeepers had a duty to the traveling public which they were bound to carry out.

The court upheld his views and fined the proprietor.

Woman "Bit by Sandwich"
Wins $1,000 From Cafe

New York.—Katharine Purce obtained a verdict for $1,000 in city court in a suit she brought against a restaurant concern for damages suffered when she was "bit by a sandwich" in an "automatic" food dispensary.

The sandwich contained some creature which bit Miss Purce on the lip. An autopsy held immediately afterward in the kitchen failed to identify the biter definitely. Miss Purce declared it was a lizard. The manager of the restaurant thought it was merely a centipede or, perhaps a wasp.

Judge Finelite advised the jury in his charge that the Court of Appeals has held that a restaurant is responsible for the quality of its food. Food containing lizards or other obnoxious insects, he said, was not palatable.

Acid Shampoo Burns

Columbus, Ohio.—Miss Irma Wagner, twenty, 587 Hamlet street, is in Mercy hospital as a result of a shampoo. According to information furnished hospital attaches, she was burned severely when an employee of a "beauty parlor" accidentally poured acid instead of a shampoo lotion upon her head preparatory to giving her a shampoo.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

There was a merry gathering at the Country club Friday afternoon for the bridge luncheon, the first of the many afternoon parties arranged for the women of the club and which proved to be a very delightful affair.

The club rooms, en fête for the occasion, never were more attractive than with the many beautiful flowers, which the season offers and which were artistically placed upon the mantles, window ledges, tables and even in baskets in the corners of the rooms.

Twenty-two tables were arranged for the luncheon served at 1 o'clock. Prizes in bridge were won by Miss Swicher and Mrs. W. A. Story.

A party from Circleville with Miss Virginia Schulze as hostess included Mrs. Clark Will, Mrs. Joseph Noecker, Mrs. Harry Heffner, Miss Miriam Ruggles, Misses Helen Bennett and Allison Deleplaine.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

A very delightful surprise was given Mrs. Sarah Stout yesterday at her home in East Town street, in honor of her sixty-ninth birthday. Those present were

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Stout, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Stout and sons, John and Donald, of Chillicothe; Mr. and Mrs. David Stout and sons, Chester and Elza, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Stout, Miss Clara Kaylor, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. ## AMUSEMENTS

"The Price of a Party" which opened at the Met theater is to our way of thinking, a really fine picture. It is actionful and many of the situations are startling in their dramatic effects. Added to this, a magnificent cast which is headed by Hope Hampton, Harrison Ford, Mary Astor, Arthur Edmund Carew and Dagmar Golowsky, helps to make this a truly splendid film.

The story is about a young girl, Grace Barrows, who goes to New York seeking fame and fortune along the Great White Way. Reality turns out to be a more drab affair than the illusions of her imagination. The best she can do is to get a job as a cabaret dancer. Kenneth Bellwood, an unscrupulous broker, is very desirous of keeping Robert Casson, a young engineer in New York while he, Bellwood, cheats him out of some valuable concessions in Brazil. By putting the matter in a favorable light, he persuades Grace to entertain Casson in a lavish apartment that he has provided for the purpose. Grace learns of Bellwood's infamy and tells him that she is going to tell Casson, whom she loves the whole truth. To complicate matters, Grace's sister arrives from Boston in search of excitement. The two girls are locked in the apartment, but just as Bellwood is about to force Grace to carry out his plans he is murdered by an unknown person. A tense and thrilling climax brings about a reconciliation between Casson and Grace to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The picture is based on the story of the same name by William MacHarg, and was produced by Howard Estabrook for Associated Exhibitors.

MAY FESTIVAL.

Miss Elsie Redfern will give an entertainment in the auditorium of the Methodist church Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Following the program the ladies will have a bake sale in the basement. Home made candy, pop corn, ice cream, cake, doughnuts and coffee will be served. There will be a fish pond and winding of the maypole by the children. 26mayd3.

FINDING LOVE IN LUCILLA'S HAVEN

By JANE GORDON

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"MISS LUCILLA has such odd ways," the gossips said. "Don't seem to enter into good works as she should. Last week when Mr. Miles died, and every one was going to see poor Mrs. Miles, and taking flowers and helping with the funeral, Miss Lucilla never came by."

The house was very desolate when Lucilla did go. She entered the porch where the old man had so often sat, and then, following her own tap at the door, Lucilla stepped inside. The widow looked up from a book.

"I knew," said Lucilla gently, "that you would be lonely after all was over, Mrs. Miles, and I've come to stay the night with you, if you like." Lucilla took her embroidery, to sit companionably by the evening lamp.

The elder woman arose to pat softly the waving brown hair of her guest. "My dear," she said. "I can't say how glad I am to have you. It is lonely."

The little old lady of the big house, following soon her beloved husband, bequeathed to the one who had remembered her in her loneliness the same big village home, with its surrounding gardens. Lucilla was overwhelmed—"for how," she smilingly asked Hannah, who had served her many years—"how are we two lone women to occupy that great place?"

There was no need of taking furnishings; the house was quite complete. "And," the gossips wondered, "what will Miss Lucilla, with her queer ways, do now? She never gave to the hospital fund we raised, though she might have spared something—nor helped with the poverty-stricken Ryans that we were all sewing and baking for."

Lucilla, too, walking down the garden paths, was asking herself the question of how to best enjoy her new prosperity. A man met her—a shabby figure—diffidence born of many rebuffs in his hesitating speech. "Ma'am, Miss Dale," he ventured, "I was wonderin' if you might, maybe, give me some work to do about the garden. I'm a good gardener—though."

The hesitating speech died away altogether; it may have been Lucilla's warming smile which gave new courage—"though," went on Herman, "you know, like all the rest, that once I was sent up for stealing—a good many years ago. Yet, not enough years," the man added bitterly, "to make people forget. I've gone straight ever since, Miss Lucilla. I wouldn't take a thing from you, Miss Lucilla, if you'd let me work, and stop here; I could sleep in the barn, and not go into the house at all."

Queer? Miss Lucilla smiled to herself. She still loved the thrill of chance, when chance was worth while. Herman should have his delayed chance of making good. The tiny undernourished Italian boy from below the station came with the evening paper from the city. "Gee!" he exclaimed, hearing the direction given to Hannah, "don't I wish I could stay here, and work with him. I'm good at gardening. Before my mother died, and I got a place to work in the fruit stand at the station, I used to work our garden. Gee! Will you let me work here, too, Miss Dale—they's work and more for two."

"Why," said Lucilla, happily surprised at her good fortune, "you know, Tonie, I was trying to think whom I might get to help Herman. There is a neat little attic room, and then, with plenty of milk and cream from our cows, you'd soon be strong enough to make the gardens profitable to me."

Hannah came to the doorway, a whimsical look on her broad face. "And with all the coming help to cook and work for," Hannah asked, "who is to help out in the kitchen?"

Lucilla stared, then laughed softly. "Hannah," she said, "it is really strange how one's duty is pointed out and its advantages. Only this morning I had a letter from Uncle Nathan's sister, who has been passed around among her relatives because, to be honest, Hannah, she is rather trying in disposition. However, Aunt Minnie is an excellent cook. I know she'd love to do up the fruit that will come from our garden. Why, Hannah, we might make our inmates self-supporting, after awhile, selling garden stuff and preserves and jellies. And old Mrs. Trimble, whom they are thinking of taking to the poor home, if we could let her have the warm rear lower bedroom, Hannah, I do believe I might find orders for knitting and mending to keep her busy."

When the new doctor came to Linden village he called one night to visit a small Italian boy in the big house of the lovely gardens; he found a tenderly concerned nurse in attendance. "You must do your best for my Tonie," this white-clad nurse, who was Lucilla, told him. "We cannot spare Tonie from our family."

The doctor had heard of the strangely assorted family, and its happy proving. When he had known Miss Lucilla a very short time he earnestly agreed with Herman's opinion. "She is an angel," as Herman had fervently exclaimed.

So Lucilla's legacy and Lucilla's unselfish venture came to end in her love affair. For the doctor later persuaded her that a doctor's home needs a wife.

And Lucilla agreed with him happily, that Hannah might be depended upon to carry on the work of the haven. Lucilla still lends the home a helpful presence—"her dear way," her husband says.

World's Deepest Well

The deepest well in the world was completed recently by engineers near Latrobe, Pa., when they struck natural gas at a depth of 7,428 feet, or almost one and one-half miles, says Popular Science Monthly. Work on the well was begun in 1922, and drilling continued for 30 months. The gas is now flowing at a rate of 500,000 cubic feet a day. The cost of sinking the well was about $200,000.

AND THEY CALLED THIS SIMPLE RECIPE

Oswald Garrison Villard, the brilliant New York reformer, was praising the reparations settlement.

"We'll soon have German dyes back again," he said, "and that will be a good thing. Our native dyemakers, with the best will in the world, have not had much success in making dyes from the German recipes, and this is not to be wondered at, for those recipes are very complicated.

"One of the simpler German dye recipes runs like this:

"Betaamidoalizarin is the reduction of one of the oldest alizarin colors known, namely, alizarin orange, which chemically is nitroalizarin. When betaamidoalizarin is subjected to the identical reaction which produced from anthraquinone sulphonic acid the first synthetic alizarin—that is, the melting of the product with caustic alkali at high temperature—dihydroanthraquinoneazine is obtained."—Detroit Free Press.

SAME OLD WEATHER

The fickle and unpleasant weather we have been having the past few days seems to be very much like that which bothered Charles Lamb in England about this season exactly 100 years ago. In a letter to his friend, Barton, written in May, 1825, Lamb complains of a cold which gave him "ringing in the ears," because of which, he says he, "I get my music for nothing." He went on to say philosophically: "But the weather seems to be softening, and will thaw my stunnings. Coleridge, writing to me a week or two since, begins his note—'Summer has set in with its usual severity.'"—Philadelphia Record.

Tested Methods of Improvement

Need for Better Live Stock Is Brought to Fore in Recent Bulletin.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With all that has been printed and said about the economic value of improved live stock and with the number and size of our fairs and shows devoted largely to the display of animal excellence, the casual observer may conclude that a large proportion of our domestic live stock is now pure bred or at least well bred. The facts, however, lead to another conclusion.

Need for Improvement.
The need for improving live stock in this country is brought to the fore in a recent publication of the United States Department of Agriculture, Miscellaneous Circular 33, "Some Tested Methods of Live-Stock Improvement," by D. S. Burch of the bureau of animal industry. The circular says that this need is apparent on almost every hand, and sets out to help meet this need by outlining various methods for bringing about more widespread use of superior breeding animals.

Among the methods described as having been useful in bringing about improvement are the better sires, better stock plan, boys' and girls' clubs, demonstrations, exhibits, scrub sire trials, breeders' associations, cow-testing associations, co-operative bull associations, stallion registry, government horse-breeding activities, ton-litter contest, thousand-pound calf clubs, ram rings, poultry improvement activities and legislation. Considerable detail is given in the circular concerning the ways these various methods have been used and some of the results which have been obtained.

In a foreword to the circular, Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau of animal industry, says, "The widespread use of inferior male breeding animals has been for many years a cause of low production per animal and of needlessly poor quality. The continuance of such conditions is uneconomical and unnecessary. The direct and practical means of improvement is to use breeding animals, especially sires, which are true representatives of breeds developed for a definite, useful purpose.

Become National Movement.
"Live-stock improvement," he says, "has proved very popular, not only with those who produce the animals, but with those who help to market them and those who use their products. Indeed, it has become a national movement. It adds to the prosperity of the entire community and increases the palatability of our meats. A sound method that is capable of increasing the returns of farmers in a single county by $100,000 needs but a fair trial. Let us hasten such improvement wherever live stock are kept."

Copies of the circular may be had free by addressing the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Help to Farmer to Know the Cost of His Silage

Farmers have to choose rations so as to get the most for their money. It is, therefore, a help to the farmer to know the cost of his silage, just as he knows the price of the corn, hay and supplements that he feeds. With a view of supplying this kind of knowledge the Missouri College of Agriculture last year kept cost records on all the items involved in filling ten silos. The figures showed that the average cost per ton of corn silage in 1924 on the farms considered was $5.90 per ton. The items and their total, figured at prices current in 1924, are reported by B. H. Frame, farm management accountant at the college, as follows:

|                                                 |           |

Copper Carbonate Will Prevent Smut on Oats

The copper carbonate treatment for smut may be applied to hull-less oats in the same manner as for wheat. To apply the treatment mix from two to four ounces of the copper carbonate thoroughly with each bushel of grain. Pour it back and forth between two tubs or milk cans to cover each seed with the dust. Use no water and plant any time without further care. A barrel or box may be rigged up to rotate like a barrel churn that will mix the seed thoroughly and the work may be done easier and more rapidly. The formaldehyde treatment may also be used on the hull-less variety in the same manner as with the hulled oats.

When Horse Coughs

When a horse coughs the cause must be removed. Any sort of irritation or inflammation that affects the breathing apparatus of a horse will cause coughing and there are all kinds of things that will cause that. Diseases, dusty feed, gases from manure when stable is poorly ventilated, and many other things may predispose a cough. Regular cough sirup for horses or glycoheroin in one-ounce doses two or three times per day will usually give relief.

The English Language.

GET RIGHT AMOUNT OF FUN FROM LIFE

Competitive Struggle Is Only Handicap.

Sinclair Lewis is right; a lot of Americans do not get enough fun out of life.

The young intellectuals challenge contemporary life and thought because it is regimented and standardized. Davenport is put in front of fireplaces, not because the owners want them there, but because other people have them there. Mr. Babbitt installs a cigar lighter in his car, not because he thinks he gets fun out of a harmlessly glittering automobile accessory, but because he thinks it gives "class" to his machine. Doing things because other people do them, or doing them insincerely to impress other people, is one good way of leading a dull life.

Fun comes by being one's self. The exterior act should reflect the one within. The davenport is in its proper place when it is where you want it as a being living your own life and not giving a fig for artificial mass standards. Golf is a good game if you play it because you like it. But it is a poor pastime when you find it but another way of doing what other people do. You might rather play marbles or hopscotch, if marbles or hopscotch better releases your fun instinct.

The remedy for much of which the young intellectuals complain lies in questioning ourselves more as to why we do things. Have our opinions come to us ready-made from our parents, or from our environment, or have we thought things out for ourselves? Do we put cigar lighters on our cars for the convenience of cigar smokers or to acquire a sham "class"? Why not do more things, think more things, feel more things, that are really our own? That's one way to have fun.

Men want to make things and do things that reflect themselves. They want to create, in the spirit of play, things beautiful or odd or interesting. They get fun out of life to the extent in which the things they make or do reflect what they really are. But as long as the chief business of life lies in coming out better than our brothers in the competitive struggle the brighter business of making life interesting and creative must wait.—Atlantic City Evening Union.

POTATO GREATEST FOOD VEGETABLE

Is One of America's Many Valuable Gifts to Nations of World.

Washington.—Ireland had a poor potato harvest last fall, and as a result parts of the island are reported to be on the verge of famine.

"It takes such tragic occurrences as Ireland's food shortage to bring home to the average man the tremendous importance of the potato," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society. "Half a dozen other countries of Europe would be in a similar plight if their potato crops failed," continues the bulletin, "although a few centuries ago potatoes had not been heard of in any of these lands."

One of America's Valuable Gifts.

"The potato is one of the many valuable gifts of America to the world. Most histories, busy chronicling wars and elections and perhaps inventions, fail to emphasize the introduction of the potato from America to Europe, or else mention it quite incidentally. Economists and sociologists, however, could make a good case for the potato as the New World product which has most deeply affected life in the Old World."

"When Spanish and English explorers and settlers found the potato it was grown in a desultory, sort of way, along the Atlantic coast of parts of North America and the Pacific coast of South America. It had probably spread to those regions from Peru, for it is believed to have been developed into a domestic plant in the mountain valleys of that land some thousands of years ago by pre-Inca farmers. The world did not take to the potato at first, either in America or Europe. Not until well after the American Revolution did it become a crop of major importance in North America; and about the time of the French Revolution a Parisian philanthropist, Parmentier, found it uphill work to induce the poor of the French metropolis to eat the tubers in free soup kitchens."

"The popularity of this 'apple of the earth' grew with a rush when its virtues once became known. Ireland was converted early—so much so, that a knowledge of the tuber spread from that island to other European lands, and it thereby acquired the misnomer, 'Irish potato.' The potato created an agricultural revolution in northern Europe and soon became the dominant crop. It even made possible an increase in population in a number of European countries. Now it is to that part of the world what rice is to the Orient. It is more truly the staff of life in large areas of the West than wheat itself. But for the potato Germany probably could not have remained in the World war more than a year or so."

"Europe has made much greater use of the potato than the land of its discovery. Approximately six billion bushels are now grown in the world each year. If this production could be brought to one place it would fill a gigantic bin 10 miles long, a mile wide and 25 feet deep. If a partition were placed across such a bin at the nine-mile post the potatoes in the larger compartment would represent the production of Europe and Great Britain. Seven-tenths of the potatoes in the smaller division would represent the contribution of the United States to the world crop, and the remaining three-tenths would represent those produced in the rest of the world. Germany, Russia (it had a greater acreage than Germany before the World war), the lands that made up Austria-Hungary, and France, each produces more potatoes than the United States."

Leads Both Rice and Wheat.

"One of the outstanding virtues of the potato which has made it the leading vegetable product in northern Europe and northern United States is that it grows to perfection in regions too cool and too moist for satisfactory wheat culture. Another advantage is the tremendous amount of food material per acre contributed by potatoes. A hundred bushels per acre is an average yield in the United States, but in Germany the yield is nearly twice as great. The greatest yield in any country is in the Netherlands, where more than 250 bushels per acre are produced. Under exceptionally favorable conditions a single acre has been known to produce 600 bushels."

"As a world crop the potato, the upstart vegetable from the New World, has shouldered its way ahead of both rice and wheat. More pounds of potatoes are now produced than of any other single domestic vegetable product. Potatoes have won first place in the world, too, in the matter of diffusion. They have become an important crop in the temperate and cool portions of every continent—from France to Scandinavia, in Siberia, the Americas, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand."

"Potatoes are not alone a food vegetable. They already fill an important place in industry and undoubtedly will become more important in that field."

Use German Dock

London, England.—A job has been found at last for the former German floating dock which has been berthed in the Mersey since being delivered under the peace treaty. The admiralty has decided to send it to Malta for service in docking the capital ships of the Mediterranean fleet.

Historic Tavern to Be Made Into Apartments

Lynn, Mass.—"Ye Olde Berry Tavern" in Danvers, one of the few remaining colonial taverns and the place where Benedict Arnold stopped when he passed through Massachusetts on his march to Quebec, will soon be converted into an apartment house.

The place has not paid for years. The eighteenth amendment was too much for the success of the colonial landmark as a tavern. The ancient structure will be moved back 60 feet from its location on the Old Boston Post road before alterations are begun.
